Synopsis:

Plaintiff and predecessor in title have been in actual, open, notorious, exclusive, hostile, and adverse possession of the real property here involved since at least January 2, 1988. Plaintiff and predecessor have paid the ad valorem taxes on the property since 1988. The property involved consists of one (1) parcel of land situated in Harris County, Texas. Plaintiff also pleads assumption of deed into Plaintiff as Plaintiff has openly exercised dominion over and asserted claim to said real property, and paid the taxes on the Property annually before such taxes became delinquent, for over thirty (30) years before commencement of this action. Any persons holding the putative record title to this land have not exercised dominion over the property and have not paid taxes on this property at any time or for one or more years during the 30 years preceding the commencement of this action. This Property is described by metes and bounds on Exhibit 1, attached hereto and made a part hereof for all purposes. This Property is shown and set forth on the survey,

Exhibit 2, attached hereto and made a part hereof for all purposes.

Plaintiff has been and now are cultivating, using, and enjoying the premise continuously during the entire period of Plaintiff's possession.

Notice hereof shall be given by publishing this Citation once a week for four consecutive weeks previous to the 09th day of September, 2019 in some newspaper published in the County of Harris, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then the nearest county where a newspaper is published, and this Citation shall be returned on the 16th day of September, 2019 which is forty two days after the date it is issued, and the first publication shall be at least twenty-eight days before said return day.

Herein Fail Not, but have before said court on said return day this Writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed same. Witness: Marilyn Burgess, District Clerk, Harris County, Texas. engine test in Florida. Despite the setback, SpaceX still aims to squeeze in its first test flight with astronauts by year's end.

Boeing intends to launch its Starliner capsule without a crew this fall, followed by a test flight with a crew sometime early next year.

It was the third spacewalk for Hague and the first for Morgan, an Army doctor who moved into the station a month ago.

"Docs rock," Mission Control radioed to Morgan as the work got underway.

Hague's mother delivered homemade goodies to Houston flight controllers midway through spacewalk.

"I heard she was busy in the kitchen yesterday," Hague said. "I hope everyone enjoys it. I'm jealous."

"Well," replied Mission Control, "we have a certain jealousy of what you guys are doing as well, so I'd say it's an even trade."

in," said Scott Lake of Western Watersheds Project, citing fire-prone cheatgrass in particular.

But federal officials gave the final approval earlier this year. Some cutting was done in the spring, and the pace picked up in the last three weeks with crews of 50 to 60 workers with chain saws cutting down junipers.

"Historically, fire would have kept these trees in check," said Ben Sitz of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. "We're trying to preserve the diversity we have."

The project is designed around sage grouse breeding grounds, called leks, where males perform elaborate rituals. The project area contains numerous leks, both active and abandoned as junipers moved in.

Radio-telemetry on sage grouse has determined that leks ideally have no or few trees within a 6-mile (9.5-kilometer) radius, which gives nesting sage grouse hens the best chance to raise their chicks. That means each lek needs about 115 square miles (295 square kilometers) of treeless sagebrush. The project aims to cut down junipers within that distance of leks.

Junipers are being cut where sagebrush still covers most of the ground. Thicker stands of junipers that have pushed out sagebrush are being left as those areas would take decades to become suitable sage grouse habitat. But those thicker stands could be targeted for a future project.

lican member of the state Legislature.

"This is an effort to get accurate information," said Zaitz, a former investigative reporter with the Oregonian newspaper and a two-time Pulitzer Prize finalist. "The public is entitled to that information - not only entitled to that information, it deserves it."

Smith responded only after the story was published on Aug. 14 with the headline "Malheur County lured company to Ontario with tax break promise, then doesn't deliver."

In a statement that the newspaper published online, Smith said no "pre-application" for a property tax exemption had been approved or signed.

"Over the last six months, me and my staff have been subjected to endless phone calls, hostile emails at all hours of the day and unwelcome office visits," Smith asserted.

Zaitz said Caldwell sent two emails to Smith during business hours seeking comment. Zaitz said he felt it was his duty to email Smith on Saturday to provide every opportunity to comment before the newspaper went to press. Located in a small Old West-style building, the weekly publishes 1,400 copies, with additional paid online subscribers. The county has 31,000 residents, with almost 10 times as many cattle, and is heavily Republican.

burg, a city about 100 miles (160 kilometers) from the governor's mansion in Charleston but not far from The Greenbrier, the lavish resort he owns that hosts a PGA tour and has been the site of an annual congressional getaway. His official state website also says he lives in Lewisburg.

"You can have more than one residence, and he resides in the capital and he resides wherever he chooses on a nightly basis. But the fact remains he continues to perform the duties as governor in his discretion, and he resides as the Constitution requires in Charleston," Justice attorney Michael Carey said after the hearing.

The official governor's mansion in Charleston is a three-story Georgian Colonial of red brick, with Corinthian columns, a ballroom, library and private quarters for the governor. It is beside the state Capitol building and across from the Kanawha River. Justice's modest personal home sits off a tiny two-lane road in rural Lewisburg, which is known for the West Virginia State Fair.
