Quakes

barrels of produced water a day for the Midland Basin.

"Operators are looking for environmentally sustainable alternatives to disposal within these SRAs and seismic clusters, which is why system interconnectivity and commercial recycling is central to sensible stewardship of the water," Jennaro said.

Regulatory action from the Texas commission, he said, will severely impact operations and force the industry to seek alternatives.

Jennaro said the occurrence of smaller earthquakes began to increase in 2017, when oil and gas boomed in the region, up to about three per day recently.

In 2021, records show the region was on track for more than 1,200 earthquakes with magnitudes of 1 to 4.

With more seismicity in Texas, Jennaro said that could mean sending more water to New Mexico to avoid Texas' increased regulatory action.

Adrienne Sandoval, director of New Mexico's Oil Conservation Division, said her agency is encouraging operators to recycle and reuse water instead of injecting it.

To avoid over-pressurization, Sandoval said the division implemented well-spacing requirements as a condition of permitted disposal wells.

Sandoval said the state has seen some induced seismicity on the New Mexico side of the border.

"It's sort of along the Texas line and along the Lea and Eddy county line. We're working with operators to gather data," she said, noting that officials want to be proactive and protective "so we can minimize seismic activity as much as we can."

Sunday's statement.

Nordstrom was open as usual on Sunday.

The incident came a day after several high-end stores in San Francisco's Union Square were broken into by a large group of people who smashed windows, stole merchandise, and then ran to waiting cars, police said.

Louis Vuitton, Fendi, Yves Saint Laurent, Burberry, and Dolce & Gabbana were all targeted Friday night, Fox 2 News reported.

San Francisco Police Officer Robert Rueca said in a statement posted on social media that officers responded to reports of possible looting and vandalism at Union Square stores Friday night and arrested several people.

with my cellphone and what I was wearing," she said, adding that personal belongings of her parents, grandparents and great-grandparents were in the house. "It's 100 years of memory of a Guadeloupean family that went up in smoke in 15 minutes."

She said she did not receive help from authorities yet. "We are completely left to ourselves. I don't know who is clearing (the house). Is it us, the insurance, the city hall?"

The protests were called for by unions to denounce France's COVID-19 health pass, which is required to access restaurants and cafes, cultural venues, sport arenas and long-distance travel. Demonstrators were also protesting France's mandatory vaccinations for health care workers. In recent days, they broadened their demands to include a general salary increase, higher unemployment benefits and the hiring of more teachers.

medical school next year to become a doctor serving LGBTQ populations, a calling he found in college after growing up gay in what he described as a conservative environment.

But a Rhodes scholarship will help Babu embark on a policy career that will touch the lives of many more queer and transgender people, he said. His senior thesis explores the health benefits of gender-affirming medical care for transgender children. That kind of research is necessary, Babu said, because some state lawmakers have sought to limit such care.

"I was hoping to just be a doctor for queer, trans patients," Babu said. "This now gives me an opportunity to be in health policy and actually affect change at that level" that is "far more widespread and far-reaching."

Three schools — Claremont McKenna College, Mount Holyoke College and Union College — have a recipient for the first time in at least 25 years.

All 32 scholars were expected to start at Oxford in October. The scholarship covers financial expenses to attend the school.

Applicants must be endorsed by their college or university. Selection committees from 16 U.S. districts then choose and interview finalists before electing two students from each district.
