communication breakdowns and other mistakes, among them:

– Arredondo did not have a radio with him.

– Police and sheriff's radios did not work within the school; only the radios of Border Patrol agents on the scene worked inside the school, and even they did not work perfectly.

– Some diagrams of the school that police were using to coordinate their response were wrong.

State police initially said the gunman entered the school through an exterior door that had been propped open by a teacher, but McCraw said that the teacher had closed the door and it could only be locked from the outside.

"There's no way for her to know the door is locked" McCraw said. "He walked straight through."

inflation.

Struggling to curb the worst inflation outbreak in four decades, Powell last week engineered a three-quarters-of-a-point increase in the Fed's short-term interest rate – the largest single rate hike in a quarter-century. It was an unexpectedly aggressive move after Powell had made clear a month earlier that a more modest half-point rate hike was coming.

At his news conference, Powell defended the Fed's decision by noting that the most recent inflation readings had been even more worrisome than expected. The Fed's hike will make it more expensive for many consumers and businesses to borrow.

Yet Powell's explanation was faulted by many Fed watchers, with some complaining that he had failed to articulate a coherent and consistent policy.

"The Fed was ad-libbing, scrambling to catch up to the painfully higher inflation," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. "The Fed doesn't have a script and is kind of making it up as it goes here."

for an hourlong lunch and cleaning break each day.

When a local pool is not open, young people may go swimming in places without lifeguards, Fisher said. That can result in more drownings, which disproportionately affect people of color. In the U.S., Black people under 29 are 1.5 times more likely to drown compared with white Americans of the same age, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

About 330,000 people enroll the American Red Cross' lifeguarding course annually. That figure shrank, as many pools shuttered due to the pandemic, but is now rising, Jenelle Eli, senior director of media relations for the American Red Cross said in a statement to The Associated Press.

Indy Parks requires its lifeguards to pass a course in which they swim 100 yards, tread water for a minute without using their hands and retrieve a 10-pound object from the bottom of a pool. Starting pay is $15 per hour, up from $13 an hour earlier this year. Those who stay through the season will receive a $100 retention bonus, Boyd said.

"I've tried to get some of my friends that want to get a summer job and want to have money in their pockets," said second-year lifeguard Donald Harris, 17. "They've just said lifeguarding isn't for them."

At Indiana's state parks, lifeguards are paid $11 an hour. All of the state's 37 facilities remain open, but some operate on limited hours, said Terry Coleman, director of the Division of Indiana State Parks. Many Indiana state parks additionally have shallow swimming areas without lifeguards, Coleman said.

"We're looking at potential incentives for maybe the 2023 recreation season, but nothing in stone yet," he said.

In Maine, several state parks started the season without lifeguards, and visitors are informed at the park entrance when no lifeguard is on duty, said Jim Britt, spokesperson for the Maine Department of Agriculture, Conservation and Forestry. The state pays lifeguards about $16 an hour.

"It's a concern," Britt said. "There's no two ways about it. We want lifeguards to be there and to be on duty."

Chicago, which boasts one of the nation's largest aquatic programs – 77 public pools and 22 beaches that serve a population of nearly 2.75 million – pushed opening day for pools back to July 5 from June 24.

"Chicago families rely on our park programs during the summer, so we are not giving up," Chicago Park District Superintendent Rosa Escareño said in a news release.
