Jobs

though, have begun to emerge. Home sales have tumbled. A measure of factory activity indicated that it has contracted for seven straight months.

And consumers are showing signs of straining to keep up with higher prices. The proportion of Americans who are struggling to stay current on their credit card and auto loan debt rose in the first three months of this year, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Fed officials are expected to forgo a rate increase at their June 13-14 meeting to allow time to assess how their previous rate hikes have affected the inflation pressures underlying the economy. Higher rates typically take time to affect growth and hiring. The Fed wants to avoid raising its key rate to the point where it would slow borrowing and spending so much as to cause a deep recession.

The U.S. economy as a whole has been gradually weakening. It grew at a lackluster 1.3% annual rate from January through March, after 2.6% annual growth from October through December and 3.2% from July through September.

Many employers are still engaged in so-called "catch-up hiring," particularly in such sectors as restaurants, hotels and entertainment venues. Even as customer demand in these industries has spiked, the number of employed workers remains below pre-pandemic levels.

popularity in the last decade. Venmo now has more than 90 million customers and recently announced it was going to allow parents to create accounts for their teenage children, potentially bringing in tens of millions of new customers for the app.

Apple recently announced a savings account tied to its Apple Card that is operated by Goldman Sachs. The savings account took in billions of dollars in deposits within days of its launch.

The Financial Technology Association, an industry group that represents PayPal as well as Cash App's owner Block, emphasized in a statement that those products are safe.

"Tens of millions of American consumers and small businesses rely on payment apps to better spend, manage, and send their money. These accounts are safe and transparent, with users receiving FDIC Insurance on their accounts depending on the products they use," the association said.

eral system that determines if employees can legally work in the U.S. Another provision requires hospitals that accept Medicaid to include a citizenship question on intake forms, which critics have said is intended to dissuade immigrants living in the U.S. illegally from seeking medical care.

Last month, the Latino civil rights group LULAC issued a travel advisory for Hispanics, warning that the new law marginalizes immigrant communities and was immoral. Other civil rights groups, including the NAACP and the Human Rights Campaign, also have issued travel advisories for Florida, saying new laws and policies by DeSantis and Republican lawmakers are "openly hostile toward African Americans, people of color and LGBTQ+ individuals."

DeSantis launched a campaign for the 2024 GOP presidential nomination last week.

A spokesman for the governor's office on Thursday said the new law targets illegal immigration, not those who are in the U.S. legally.

"The media has been deliberately inaccurate about this distinction between legal and illegal immigration to create this very sort of outrage based on a false premise," said Jeremy Redfern, press secretary for DeSantis' office. "Any business that exploits this crisis by employing illegal aliens instead of Floridians will be held accountable. Every country defends its borders with a sovereign right to do so."

more labor.

For the foreseeable future, demographic patterns undeniably indicate that the demand for workers will not be met by natural expansion in the native population. Baby boomers continue to retire, and the numbers of people in younger age groups are falling pretty dramatically. Birth rates are near historic lows, and the participation rate is on a definitive downward trajectory. Simply stated, we are not making enough workers!

Despite this situation, the US has curtailed the number of workers allowed in, even as workforce needs become increasingly more acute. Although the current situation at the southern border is clearly chaotic and must be addressed, sensible immigration reform is also essential to providing the human resources required to sustain growth and prosperity. This is not rocket science! Stay safe!
