DAILY COURT REVIEW

Super-sized TVs

sung introduced its first 98-inch TV in 2019 with a hefty price tag of $99,000; it now has four versions starting at $4,000, the company said.

Anthony Ash, a 42-year-old owner of a wood pallet and recycling business, recently bought a 98-inch Sony for his 14,000-square-foot house in Bristol, Wisconsin. The device, which cost about $5,000 excluding installation fees, replaced an 85" TV in the great room off his kitchen. Ash now has 17 televisions at home and uses some to display digital art.

"We just saw that the price was affordable for what we were looking for and thought, 'Why not?'" he said of deciding to upsize to the Sony. "You get a better TV experience with a bigger TV. You're sitting watching TV with a person on TV that is the same size as you. You can put yourself in the scene."

The amount of time that many people spend staring at their cellphones and tablets, including to stream movies and TV shows, is another factor driving the growth of widescreen TV screens. Overall TV sales revenue fell 4%, while the number of units sold rose 1% from the January through September period, Circana said.

Most people only invest in a television every seven years, but when they do, they typically choose bigger ones, according to Rick Kowalski, the senior director of business intelligence at the Consumer Technology Association. In the past 15 years, the size of flat-panel TVs that were shipped to U.S. retailers and dealers grew an average of one inch a year, Kowalski said.

The coronavirus pandemic accelerated the elongation trend as people spent more time at home. In fact, screen sizes increased an average of two inches in both 2021 and 2022, and 85-inch TVs began gaining traction with consumers, Kowalski said. Shipments of 98-inch TVs to the U.S. are picking up pace this year, and models as huge as 110-115 inches are on the market right now, he said.

"You get better resolution over time," Kowalski said. "You get better picture quality. And so just over time, it's easier to produce those sets and improve the technology."

request.

The Cannabis Control Division stated in filings related to the case that it complied with notice and hearing requirements and had afforded the company its due process rights.

The company plans to ask a state district judge to set aside the order revoking the license and to order state regulators to hold a hearing, Candelaria said. He added that NNK Equity also plans to sue the state for destroying what he said amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars of private property.

smoke-free U.K."

The number of people who smoke in Britain has declined by two-thirds since the 1970s, but some 6.4 million people — or about 13% of the population — still smoke, according to official figures.

Authorities say smoking causes some 80,000 deaths a year in the U.K. and remains the number one preventable cause of death, disability and poor health.

saw strange shadows around their home, and 40% said they saw ghosts.

Only 1 in 9 homeowners said they knew the home was haunted before moving in and chose to live there anyway.

However, homeowners' quality of life suffers when living in a haunted house. About 65% said living with ghosts increased their stress, 52% said they lost sleep, 36% said they felt unsafe, and 32% dreaded going home.

Almost two-thirds of those homeowners (63%) said there were no advantages to living in a haunted house, and more than one-fourth (27%) regretted moving in. Among former haunted house occupants, a solid 58% said they wouldn't buy another home they knew was haunted.

What Is Scariest Than Ghosts?

Ghosts are scary, but home repairs are more frightening — and expensive. Eighty percent of Americans said mold in their home was worse than ghosts. Nearly three in four (74%) said foundation issues were scarier than ghouls, 73% said termites, 73% said asbestos, and 67% said water damage.

These fears likely stem from Americans spending an average of $18,000 a year on their home in addition to their mortgage.

Some Americans don't take ghosts seriously at all. Around 1 in 8 said homes with wallpaper are more concerning than ghosts, while 10% said a home with a lot of carpet is scarier.
