er Long, chief economist at Navy Federal Credit Union, said.

Job openings rose the most in professional and business services, which includes high-paying jobs in engineering and accounting, as well as jobs in the temp industry. Manufacturers, shipping firms, and state and local governments also advertised for more workers.

"I hope the federal government helps out a little bit. I know we're a blue state. I just hope that they come through because we all pay taxes and we all work for each other in a time like this," Ellis said.

the classroom and fired his gun, dropping the shooter to the floor.

Teacher tried to stop shooter before father arrived

As Giamanco was racing toward the building, a teacher inside the school confronted the shooter in an effort to stop his progress. She threw her phone at the attacker, tackled him and wrestled with him for control of the weapon. Giamanco's arrival stopped the struggle.

He said the teacher was "a real true hero" because her actions gave him an opening to shoot the attacker.

The teacher, a certified learning specialist, had not been previously identified, but last week, Bend-La Pine Schools identified her as Cassidy Schutz and shared her statement. She said there were no words to describe the sadness she feels following the shooting.

"This is not a story. This is a horrific and heartbreaking tragedy, and it is our real lives," Schutz wrote. "My thoughts are with those who were lost, their families, those who were hurt, and those who were there that day. My heart is with you."

Schutz said her focus is on the families, the school "and my own healing."

A second teacher in the classroom, Becky Drury, previously released a statement saying she never had a chance to shelter the children inside. She had tried to shut the door behind her, but the shooter was already there.

"Before I could do anything more, he shot me at close range and I fell to the ground," Drury said. She was shot in her left hand and right arm. Unable to get up, she said she pretended to be dead in the hopes he would not shoot her again.

Father said he was the 'last line of defense'

Giamanco said in a Oregon Public Broadcasting interview that he regrets not arriving soon enough to save everyone who was killed and injured.

After imploring the 911 operator to send help, Giamanco climbed into the school through a window and peeked into a nearby classroom. He saw Schutz and the shooter in profile, giving him an open shot.

"I felt like I was the last line of defense between him and the rest of the children," Giamanco said.

He stepped into the room and fired his gun. The teacher ran from the room and the shooter reached for his shotgun.

"I looked at him and I shot him two more times to make sure that he couldn't move, because I was afraid of him shooting anybody else," he said. "If I wasn't there, I just don't know what would have happened."

Letters with powder

upcoming arrests for treason "or worse!!"

"The writer of the letter described perceived issues with the 2020 election, claimed that President Donald Trump won the 2020 election, and voiced concerns regarding some of the same issues recurring in the then-upcoming 2024 election," Cole said.

Federal authorities announced last month that they were investigating letters with "suspicious substances" that had been mailed to congressional and election offices nationwide and urged recipients to treat the mailings as potentially hazardous.

The packages led to the evacuation of election offices in Louisiana and Oklahoma. Numerous states, from Idaho to Florida, said they either received letters or had them intercepted by the Postal Service.

In a similar case, a 37-year-old Illinois man was charged last month with sending threatening letters to members of Congress containing a white powder, including one with a note reading "HAH enjoy the gift," according to federal court records.

The FBI said it has video evidence of Martin's car stopping in October at mailboxes at Postal Service sites in Oklahoma City, Dallas and San Antonio. Investigators also gleaned his fingerprints from a letter addressed to FBI Director Kash Patel, whose first name was written as "Kashyap."
